PRIVACY

When you join the Society we record your name and address. Optionally, you may provide telephone number(s) and e-mail address. The Society collects and uses this information in order to maintain records of membership, provide accounting evidence of the Society's income from membership fees, and distribute information to Members. If you have provided a telephone number, we will normally use this only in exceptional circumstances, e.g. to advise you if a concert is cancelled at short notice.

Under the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), the legal basis for collecting and processing contact details of members and supporters is your consent for the Society to use your data in the ways described above. Information concerning membership subscriptions and Gift Aid on donations is used to comply with our legal obligation to meet the requirements of HMRC. Your data may be shared with selected committee members of the Society on a need to know basis, for example for purposes of communication. With the exception of data provided to HMRC to support Gift Aid claims, the Society does not share your data with any third party.

Membership application forms and Gift Aid records are retained securely as long as required by HMRC rules. Annual lists of members' names and contact details are deleted by the end of the following membership year. You have the right to request a copy of the information that the Society holds about you. To make such a request, or to request a change, correction or deletion of your data please contact the Society via concertscrieff@gmail.com or contact any committee member.
